NIGHTMARE!

■ 7,000 British Police were needed to try to police the annual orgy of mugging, looting, rape and murder.

THE ANNUAL NOTTING Hill nightmare recurred again this August Bank Holiday with the predictable scenes of mugging, looting, riot, rape and murder.

London's long-suffering policemen had to once again put up with being attacked and stoned by rampaging gangs of Black youths. Notting Hill's long-suffering white residents had to again put up with 48 hours of bedlam as the streets of part of our country were turned over to the mob.

Crimes were up 60% on last year's Carnival in the first day, and the total crime figures for the two days were the worst ever. 23 year-old Michael Galvin was stabbed to death as he tried to prevent a man stealing a can of coke.

A policewoman was stabbed in the back as she ran from a seething mob, while altogether more than 60 people were injured in the disturbances.

The Carnival is described by its advocates as an expression of Caribbean culture. The FLAG describes it as an abomination. an affront to all decent law-abiding British people. The National Front wouldn't ban the Notting Hill Carnival. We wouldn't have to. For with a National Front Government there wouldn't be a Caribbean culture to be expressed.

Widowed by the Carnival: Patricia Galvin.

Every single coloured immigrant would be safely back in their own countries of ethnic origin and Britain would be returned to its people.

THE CITY: A Capitalist Casino that Gambles with Jobs

by Joe Pearce

SHARE prices plunged during August as the City was hit by a wave of selling by frantic investors.

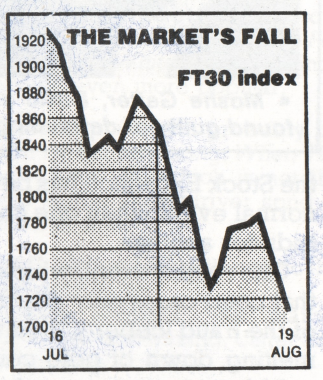
On a number of occasions the Stock Exchange computerised dealing system could not cope with the rush of sales.

During the early part of August share values fell a record £30 billion in five days - about £20 billion of that in only two days.

The collapse in share prices indicated a lack of confidence on the part of investors in the health of the British economy.

Above all, the wiping out of £30 billion in only five days exposed the inherent instability of the present shareholder system of ownership. Under this system the health of the economy depends on the confidence of huge institutional shareholders. If these huge investors lose confidence in the Nation's economic future they will sell their shares and in so doing will cause the very chaos they feared!

Yet, ironically enough, a collapse in share prices doesn't alter the amount of real wealth in the economy at all. Real wealth is the land, labour and capital which actually produces the goods a Nation needs. It is not switching imaginery Monopoly money from one account to another which is all that holding companies and other institutional shareholders do.



In short, the Stock Exchange, and the shareholder system of ownership it facilitates, is a gigantic confidence trick. As such, like all confidence tricks, it will turn sour and collapse the moment that confidence is lost.

Clearly, such a system is unacceptable. It should be replaced by a system which ensures that land and capital are owned directly by the labour which works them.

To ensure that this is achieved two things are necessary.

First, the Stock Exchange must be abolished along with the casino capitalism it facilitates. Never again should the jobs of millions of British workers and the success of numerous British companies be dependent on the whim of anonymous City investors who buy and sell shares at whim.

Second, British industry must be owned and controlled directly by British workers through the establishment of producers' co-operatives and the breaking up of large companies into small businesses wherever possible.

In the healthier Britain envisaged by the National Front, every Briton will own the home in which he lives and at least a fair share of the place at which he works.

BLIND EYE TO RIOT

CHIEF Inspector Rodney Brown of High Wycombe Police was unable to give any details of a riot in High Wycombe High Street because no report was made of the incident "because of its insignificance".

This insignificant incident took place on Friday 24th July and involved 50 West Indian youths.

According to the Midweek newspaper local residents reported . . .

★ Youths wielding sticks and jumping on cars parked in the High Street.

★ Police in riot vans with dogs standing by and doing nothing.

★ The rioters taunting the Police shouting 'chicken' and 'coward'.

★ Shoppers pleading with the Police to intervene

★ Traffic brought to a standstill for 30 minutes during the riot.

All this, according to Chief Inspector Brown, was insignificant. Perhaps he expects this sort of behaviour from West Indian youths. The FLAG condemns High Wycombe police for failing to do their duty, for turning a blind eye to a riot situation and for putting British people at risk at the hands of a black mob.

Council Ignore Petition

THE wishes of 421 South London residents from Crystal Palace's Selhurst Park area have been totally ignored by the local council.

The residents had signed a petition opposing plans for an £81,000 centre for Black youths, but the council has decided the project must go ahead.

Time and time again decent law-abiding British citizens are having their lives made a misery as council after council put the welfare of coloured immigrants before Britons; Britons who in many cases have served their country in the last war but have now become second class citizens in the country they risked there lives to defend.

POLICE SAY: Give up your money!

POLICE in Bristol have told women to hand over the handbags and money to muggers.

The statement from the police came after a women was beaten up as she tried to hold on to her handbag as she was being mugged. A police spokesman said 'It is best to hand over bags which do not contain keys or identification rather than resist and risk being assaulted.

What a shocking admission from the police that they are powerless to bring law and order to our streets.

TAMILS IN BRITAIN: NF SAYS SEND THEM BACK

by Ian Anderson

CEYLON has recently come close to civil war based on racial differences. Now what has this got to do with Britain — absolutely nothing, or at least that should be the case, however if the war explodes again Britain is likely to face a new flood of would-be immigrants.

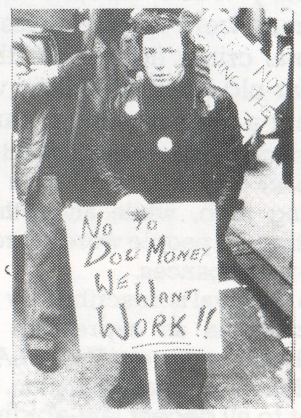
Ceylon is divided between the majority Singhalese population and a smaller proportion of Tamils who are of Indian descent. Now every so often racial violence breaks out and a few hundred get killed.

Now this is entirely a matter for them and the British wisely do that not get involved. But each time this happens groups of both Tamils and Singhalese turn up in Britain claiming to be refugees and demanding entry.

The latest batch of Tamil would-be immigrants have been detained on board the ship Earl William moored off Harwich. Having learnt from experience that British governments usually give into threats, some of them have gone on hunger strike and were promptly visited by three Labour MPs. These were Miss Diane Abbott, Black MP for Hackney; Jeremy Corbyn, well known supporter of the IRA; and Mr Harry Cohen, say no more!.

The Tamils announced to these visiting MPs that they were willing to stay in Britain or to go to Canada, France or Norway.

The FLAG says they can go straight back where they came from. If the Government does give in and admit them, then this will be a green light to thousands more to book their place on ship bound for Britain. Presumably the Labour Party will join the Conservative government and arrange a warm welcome to these Black immigants!



Unemployed Hounded as City Crooks Walk Free!

by Ian Anderson

LAST year special fraud teams investigating fraudulent dole claims 'persuaded' 8,000 people to stop seeking dole money which apparently saved a total of £6 million. All well and good this would seem, after all, why should people be allowed to claim what they are not entitled to.

However the attitude of the Government is not quite so consistent when it comes to those 'respectable City gentlemen' who last year managed to gain some £3,000 million through fraud. On a scale with the DHSS investigators, the number of people allocated to this crime in proportion to the cash involved there should be 18,500 people investigating fraud in The City and this would cost about £200 million.

Instead the current 'Fraud Investigation Group' is to be replaced by the 'Serious Fraud Office' with a budget of just £3 million. Yet recently it has been demonstrated that 'insider trading' whereby an employee or financial adviser uses confidential information to make a killing on the Stock Exchange has become a normal event when one company bids for another.

■ Moshe Getter, David and Emmanuel Schreiber, three gold dealers found guilty of defrauding the Government out of £3 million.

One recent event, which shows that court cases only affect the tip of the fraud iceberg, involved the melting down of gold coins into gold bars to escape paying VAT. The three gold dealers were found guilty of defrauding the Government of just under £3 million. Yet it is estimated that similar frauds over the past four years have cost over £200 million.

So it would seem that while a housewife who sucumbs to the temptation to sign on for a few extra pounds each week is to be pursued relentlessly, most of the City tricksters have little to fear as they hi-jack their millions.

One has to wonder whether there might not be a hint of political motive in all this.

LONDON'S TOP COP: ANOTHER POLITICAL POLICEMAN

SIR Kenneth Newman has retired as Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police. This would-be academic who manage to preside over such farces as the 'policing' of the Tottenham riots when his constables were told to just stand still when petrol bombs were being hurled at them. he also managed to allow crimes to rise from 688,000 in 1982 to 768,000 last year, and despite a 5,000 increase in his number of staff the clear up rate remained at a dismal 16%.

Well Kenneth 'Useless' Newman has been replaced by a Mr Peter Imbert. There are three aspects to this man which may give us a clue as to his likely performance in dealing with the most critical problem in London — making our streets safe.

■ Peter Imbert: 16 years with Special Branch.

Firstly, he spent 16 years in the Special Branch which should send shudders down the spine of NF members. It is the Special Branch which has been responsible for the Race Act harassment of the National Front.

Secondly, he never misses an opportunity to talk of 'the five black faces' in his family.

Thirdly, it was his old force, the Thames Valley Police that was shown on the BBC 'POLICE' series with the notorious treatment of a woman rape victim when the unfortunate lady was treated more like a criminal than someone in need of help.

We can see already what sort of Police Commissioner he is going to be. One of his first acts has been to run a publicity campaign on racial attacks (i.e. by Whites on Blacks). But despite the 16% increase in muggings over the last 12 months — there has not been a word on this.

If the people of London want protection we can see little point in expecting any help from this man. Perhaps the time has come for local communities to organise for themselves the protection of their elderly and their women.

DARTFORD BRANCH BACK IN ACTION

AT a meeting of the Dartford Branch of the National Front on Thursday 20th August it was decided that a comprehensive leafletting campaign of the area should start in September.

With regular papersales organised for the town and a recruitment drive for lapsed members in the pipeline, Kent Regional organiser Geoff Burnett is happy that another part of his patch is taking on responsibility and looking after its own affairs.

Geoff Burnett Kent Regional Organiser

Erith is the next target town for the NF in Kent and a meeting has been organised to set up a branch for early September.

All membership enquiries for Kent should be directed to The Secretary, P.O.Box 89, Sevenoaks, Kent TN13 2BQ.

THIN WHITE LINE

THE National Front is the Thin White Line which stands between Britain and oblivion. That was the central message of a speech by NF Steering Committee member, Joe Pearce, delivered at the August meeting of the Norwich Branch of the National Front.

Joe Pearce

Besides Joe's speech other business was discussed including recruitment and papersales along with the branch's travel arrangements for both the A.G.M. in October and the Remembrance Day Parade the following month.

The meeting was concluded by a collection, a raffle and a mini-auction, all of which helped raise funds for Norwich NF.

GUILTY UNTIL PROVEN INNOCENT -

The Government's latest proposal.

ANDREW Brons, Chairman of the National Front Policy Department gives his personal view of the Home Secretary's proposal to restrict the right of silence during police questioning.

THE principle that a personis innocent until proven guilty is well known. It is a principle central to all 'adversarial' systems - those of England and Wales and other common law countries like the United States. It is a well known principle but it is not so widely understood. The right of a suspect to remain silent, both during police questioning and in court, is a complement of that principle. The prosecution has the obligation to prove that a person has committed and offence; there is no obligation on the part of the suspect to prove his innocence by explaining - to the police or to the court - his acts or omissions or his motives. Thus the right of silence and the principle that a person is innocent until proven guilty are not separate principles but two aspects of the same principle; they are inseparable.

The caution (in its various forms) is familiar to aficionados of television crime fiction, although producers frequently use the Pre-1912 version or a confusing collage of that version, the one contained in the Code of Practice appendixed to the Police and Criminal Evidence Act and the 'reading of rights' in the United States!

It is reported that the Home Secretary, Mr. Douglas Hurd, is considering introducing a clause in the Criminal Justice Bill that will greatly restrict the right of silence during police questioning. It is not (yet) proposed that there should be a legal duty to make a statement or answer police questions. However, it is reported that he is reconsidering the recommendation of the Criminal Law Revision Committee in 1972 (a recommendation that was rejected by the Royal Commission on Criminal Procedure in 1981) that a person should be cautioned that any defence on which he intended to rely in court should be given to the police during questioning. If the suspect failed to do so, adverse inferences might be drawn in court. This would be a major departure from existing procedural rules that prevent prosecuting councel from referring to a suspect's silence and prevent a judge from directing a jury to infer guilt from that silence.

The proposal is superficially attractive and fears that it might lead to a suspect being 'verballed' will be dispelled, in the minds of some people, by the fact that the tape-recording of police interviews will have been introduced throughout the country by 1991. However, it is undeniable that the proposed restriction of the right of silence would be a step in the direction of the Continental 'inquisitorial', 'Civil Law' systems. We in the National Front are obviously predisposed to favour our native system rather than a 'foreign' system, despite the fact that Scotland has had a hybrid Common Law/Civil Law system since the late middle ages!

We must not, of course, be blind to arguments in favour of change but there are sound reasons for the retention of our present system. People may have perfectly legal reasons for wishing to withhold information about their movements or whereabouts and this is not only true of erring spouses! Members of political organisations should not be obliged to disclose the names of people with whom they have been associating or the premises on which they have been meeting for fear of adverse inferences being drawn. Statutes are often ambiguous and a suspect may not be sure whether or not his conduct was strictly within the law. This is particularly true of the infamous 'Race Relations' Acts and it would be unacceptable that a person who refuses to disclose which publication he has published or distributed, should, at a subsequent trial, be presumed to be 'guilty' of publishing or distributing any publication that the prosecution cares to produce in court. It is disquieting that there has been no concomitant proposal that the police should be under an obligation to give the suspect a full account of the crime of which he is suspected, before he is cautioned that he must disclose details of any defence on which he proposes to rely! It is almost reminiscent of Lewis Carroll's looking glass world: "He's in prison now, being punished: and the trial doesn't even begin till next Wednesday: and of course the crime comes last of all."

If it is considered that we should adopt this aspect of the 'inquisitorial' system (and the present writer is convinced that it is not necessary), then we must at least have the safeguards of that system. If inferences are to be drawn from a failure to answer police questions, written details of any proposed charges must be given and the questioning must be carried out by examining magistrates.

Even with those safeguards, the Home Secretary's proposed change is unacceptable. Without them, it constitutes an appalling infringement of civil liberties.

WEST MIDLANDS REPORT

by John Hill

THE West Midlands, the industrial heart of England, has over the past 12 months seen a steady rise of interest in the National Front.

With membership approaching the same as in the middle 70's, yet another branch of the party has been formed Hollywood NF. Hollywood is situated in South Birmingham, a committee has been elected with Mr. Alan Fletcher as Organiser and their first meeting is to be held early this month.

Birmingham NF are having some community success with a Thank you for Voting NF' leaflet they are putting out in their target ward of Washwood Heath. The leaflet asks people with problems over housing, education and Social Services to contact the Front and at present the committee are looking into a number of complaints.

The August meeting of Birmingham National Front was held on the 24th and more than 50 members were present.

Coventry NF have set themselves a number of targets until the end of the year, to distribute 2,000 leaflets a week, to hold regular papersales in Nuneaton, Bedworth and at Coventry City Football Club and they have have organised a number of publicity stunts to be announced after they have been done.

Dudley National Front have been active in their target ward of Lye and Wollescote where Mr John Lord hopes to stand in next May's council election.

Wolverhampton and Worcester NF, although not very active, continue to sell large quanties of The Flag.

Finally, as West Midlands Regional Organiser I would like to thank the following people for working so hard to make our area one the NF can be proud of. Andy Millward, Andy Nolan, Martin Powell, Norman Tomkinson and last but not least Will Ayto.

BRITAIN TURNS HER BACK ON THE FINAL FRONTIER

by Steve Brady B.Sc.(Hons)., ARCS, PG Cert.Ed.

ON AUGUST 5th, Mr Roy Gibson, Director-General of the British National Space Centre, the man responsible for the British Space Programme, quit. Mr Gibson's shock resignation was, he said, in protest at the total lack of serious Government interest in this increasingly important sphere of human endeavour.

Roy Gibson

Only hours after this dramatic protest by Britain's Space supremo, British Aerospace announced that lack of British Government support would now mean the revolutionary planned British space plane HOTOL would now be built, if at all, by the French. Thanks to world-beating British inventiveness and technology, HOTOL would have been years ahead of the American, and planned Soviet and French, space shuttles. Its highly-advanced Rolls-Royce engines would have allowed HOTOL to take off and land under power from an ordinary airport runway, without needing huge throwaway boosters and fuel tanks (which tend to blow up!), yet able to go into orbit. A possible passenger version would have cut flying time from London to Sydney, Australia, from 30 hours to just 45 minutes - without sonic booms or pollution. Now, yet again, British genius is to be squandered by Government meanness and lack of vision, and its fruits given away free to foreigners. A chance for Britain to take world leadership in an important field has been wasted, yet again, and thousands of potential jobs have been lost.

Two days later, on August 7th, Thatcher's dynamic British space programme took another giant leap forward when the Government announced the cancellation, after £70 million of taxpayers' money had already been spent on it, of the Zircon spy satellite. Zircon would have given Britain a sophisticated independent "eaves-dropping" capability, vital to modern defence. Now we will have to go on scrounging crucial information off the Yanks, weakening our national defence and so our national independence.

This sorry story of Britain in Space is nothing new. Ever since the Space Age dawned with the orbiting of Sputnik I in 1957, successive British Governments, both Labour and Tory, have been half-hearted, to say the least, about grasping this exciting new opportunity. Yet at first our prospects were bright. We had some of the World's best scientists and engineers, and at Woomera, in Australia, a lanuch site better placed than anything in America or Russia. For the first few years of the Space Race, it was generally believed that there was a fighting chance that the Union Jack, rather than the Stars and Stripes or the Hammer and Sickle, would be first to stand sentinel over the barren, but mineral-rich, lava plains of the Moon. But Governments dithered, grudged funds, and watched our best boffins go in despair to America. First our manned space programme, then the all-British Black Arrow space launcher, withered and died. One solitary British-launched satellite scraped into space, 14 years after Sputnik, and after France, Japan and China, as well as the superpowers, had beaten us into space. And the Heath Government had already cancelled the rest of the British satellite programme. Instead, we got bogged down in the French-controlled Euro-muddle of ESRO, ELDO and the "European Space Agency", in which we have a joke 6% share.

▪ The first man on the moon. He could have been British.

▪ The disappointed British astronauts

Today, British spending on space is half, in real money terms, what it was in 1975. Britain spends one-sixth as much on space as Germany and France and less even that Italy. This year, our space programme will even be overtaken by that of Third World joke countries like Brazil and India! Meanwhile the Americans and Russians are putting ever more money into Space, from "Star Wars" orbital battlestations to plans to mine the Moon for vital minerals and beam free energy from sunlight to Earth from satellites.

25 years of dithering and lost opportunities for Britain in Space had supposedly ended when Thatcher set up the British National Space Centre, amid loud fanfare, in 1985. But these hopes were dashed when its dynamic supremo Roy Gibson resigned. Gibson had already been disillusioned when he found Britain's answer to Mission Control was to be two floors on a dingy office block in London's Millbank, whose fifty Civil Servants don't even rate their own tea lady. When Thatcher rejected the British Space Programme she had asked him to prepare, saying it would cost too much (in fact the proposed spend was less than the Government wastes each year on foreign aid to Black Third World dictators) it was the final straw, and Britain's Space supremo walked out, saying the Government wasn't taking space seriously.

Meanwhile, in the week Britain's space programme collapsed, NASA astronaut Sally Ride announced American plans to put a colony on the Moon in 15 years, a man on Mars in thirty, and a permanent US base on the Red Planet in forty. While the Soviets pressed ahead with their own plans to put men on Mars - they already have men permanently aboard their Salyut Space Station in Earth orbit.

Even the French plan to put men in orbit by 1995, either aboard their own Hermes shuttle or, now it's up for grabs, our more advanced HOTOL design. In the meantime, the British space programme is believed to have plans to put a tea-lady into its own offices "before 1990"!

Pathetic, isn't it? The nation of Drake and Captain Cook and Scott of the Antarctic is turning its back on the final frontier, untold wealth and opportunities, because a Grantham grocer's daughter says we can't afford it. Only the NF now upholds the banner of the British pioneer spirit. Only the NF now calls for a British future in space.

ELLIS PUTS HIS FOOT IN IT!

OH Dear! Another senior policeman has put his foot in it! Superintendent John Ellis, who is in charge of the notorious Chapeltown area of Leeds was secretly taped making some interesting remarks on community relations.

While speaking to the leader of the Leeds United Asian Organisation he claimed that West Indians were mainly responsible for drugs, prostitution and brothels in the area.

The West Yorkshire police confirmed that the tape was genuine but claim that Mr. Ellis's remarks were "taken out of context" and gave a "totally distorted meaning" — so what did Mr Ellis say? He said:-

"We've cleared up nearly every crime that's been committed during the riots. So now there are 28 West Indians charged with burglary and crime".

"Prostitution, brothels and vice. There are villians in the Asian population, there are villians in the White population, but West Indians in particular create these problems and we'll deal with them as effectively as we can".

Now what context could possibly change the meanings of these statements.

A spokesman for a West Indian group inevitably based at a 'Mandela Centre' said he would be demanding a full investigation by the Police Complaints Authority.

We are sorry to tell Mr. Ellis that telling the truth is no defence when it comes to the Race Relations Inquistitors — ask Joe Pearce, he has been jailed twice for telling the truth about Race!

The Cost of our Food Mountains

TAXPAYERS had to pay £118 million last year to cover the cost of Britain's shameful food mountains, a shock Commons report revealed recently.

The money went on storing the food in accordance with Common Market regulations and on paying interest on loans to buy it in.

The bill has trebled in the last three years, while the food mountains have grown five times bigger. This scandalous waste of both food and taxpayers' money was disclosed in a report by the Commons Public Accounts Committee.

Taxpayers have to meet the cost because the Common Market can no longer afford to subsidise in full its own foolish food policy.

Surplus food valued at £1,234 million is now stored in secret dumps around Britain.

In 1984 the cost to the taxpayer of storing the surplus food and paying the interest on loans to fund it was £33 million. But, as if that figure wasn't bad enough, the cost last year had soared to an astronomical £118 million because of the massive growth of the food mountains and cash cut-backs by the EEC.

To make matters worse still, last year the EEC created a new shameful record by destroying over one million tons of food.

Surely it's time the British people put an end to this costly Common Market madness. It's time Britain realised that the cost of EEC membership is far, far too high. In short, it's time for Britain to pull out of Common Market membership altogether. Yet, in spite of the expense and the waste, the National Front is still the only political party which demands British withdrawal from the EEC.

INDIAN CAUSES A MUTINY

ANGRY parishioners are staging a rebellion at their church because an Indian has been appointed the new vicar.

More than twenty people, including members of the parochial church council, are leaving the congregation in protest.

The rebels have accused the church authorities of "betraying them" by asking Indian-born the Rev Samuel Prasadam to be vicar of All Saints Church in Luton, Bedfordshire.

His Indian-born wife Jemima is an ordained deacon who will be working with him in the parish - a move that has also aroused hostility from local parishioners.

Leading the revolt is Deputy Church Warden Mrs Gladys Lindsey. She has resigned her post, given up her seat on the parochial church council and announced that she will attend another Anglican church in the area.

"I'm not the only one who's upset" said sixty-year-old Mrs Lindsey. "Quite a few others agree with me that we need a white vicar here. It's an English church and we should have an English vicar."

Mrs Lindsey, who lives in Hampton Road, a hundred yards away from the church in Luton's Beech Hill district, said there were "quite a few parishioners" who would be moving away when Mr Prasadam arrived at the end of August.

"The trouble is" she continued, "that the Bishop of Bedford says that as we are a multi-racial society in this area, we should have an Indian vicar.

"Already, Mr Prasadam has asked the people doing the catering for h is induction to supply Halal meat, ritually slaughtered, for the benefit of Moslems who may attend.

"It's all very well for the Bishop of Bedford to tell us what we want in this multi-racial area. He doesn't have to live here."

SINKING OUT OF SIGHT

THE SCENES in Portsmouth during the first week of September, as the SDP sank into the oblivion from which they emerged only a few years ago, were scenes not unfamiliar to the National Front. They came about because, as with every new political party, there were those within it who wanted immediate success, and when that immediate success didn't come they sought dramatic change in search of that success.

The pro-Liberal merger lobby in the SDP have destroyed that party, just as the Kavanagh/Fountaine lobby within the National Front very nearly destroyed our party after the disappointing election results of 1979. They too were after instant success yet ended up with near-instant failure. We should learn our lessons from their mistakes.

EASY OPTIONS

In these days of stuggle for the National Front, struggle for our survival as we have fought off the challenge to our very existence by an unholy alliance of opportunists and schoolboy revolutionaries, it is so easy to make compromises to achieve success. It is tempting to opt for easy options in the quest for that elusive Nationalist Unity and the growth for our party that that may achieve.

But compromise for short term gain is not for the National Front. Aligning ourselves with parties who believe in a mish-mash of dictatorial/Tory-type philosophies and who keep harping back to the past rather than the looking to the future, is not progress.It is tying ourselves in with an ideology that is obsolete and those who champion its cause will end up in oblivion with those who first launched it back in the 1920's.

FIRM BASE

Over the last four years the National Front has made great strides in setting out its principles and building a firm ideological base from which to launch itself. We know that we face an Everest-like climb to attain power in Britain, but that climb is not impossible so long as we launch ourselves from a firm base.

Make no mistake, the time for the National Front will come; and when it does old National Front members, and new National Front supporters alike will 'thank God', that in the dark days of 1987 the Front stayed loyal to its principles of Racial Prerservation, National Freedom and Social Justice and didn't sacrifice them on the altar of compromise to achieve a minute short-term gain that would have dispatched us to that very graveyard for political parties that the SDP now finds itself in.

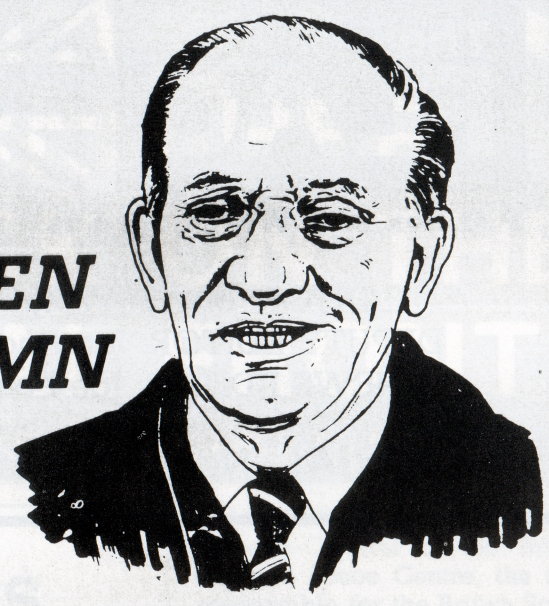
THE TED BUDDEN COLUMN



WANTED: MINISTER FOR TRAUMA

I WAS appalled to learn that crazy Michael Ryan's murderous stroll through Hungerford was followed, virtually within hours, by the ultimate horror of horrors - the invasion of 'counselling services'.

Public statements soon abounded, couched in the tired jargon of pseudo-science. The town was 'in trauma'. 'Mental scars that would last for years' - matched, no doubt, by the need for perpetual 'counselling services'. I have waited with bated breath for the demand for 'massive Government aid to counter trauma and the appointment of a Minister for Trauma' but that is a pleasure deferred though not, I'm sure, for long.

Are the people of Hungerford really like that? Are people anywhere really like that? If they are, we're in real trouble for it's a mad, mad world made in the image of the 'counselling services'.

It seems to me that there is a kind of Parkinson's Law involved here whereby 'the number of loonies will expand to match the growth of the 'counselling services'.

Certainly in America the loon explosion followed hard on the heels of the expansion in the production of psychiatrists' couches, an experience paralleled, as usual some time after, here in Britain. Psychiatry, it seems is self generating and its prognosis self-fulfilling. As any doctor will confirm, the pests who haunt doctors' surgeries need only a hint that they 'have a problem' to actually develop one.

Mental disorder is a fact of life, but then it always has been. There is nothing new about psychiatry except the jargon. Throughout the ages when individuals behaved oddly, their contemporaries knew there was something biting them and usually had a fair idea what it was. The psychiatric treatment then usually consisted of a swift kick up the pants and the advice to 'buck up your ideas'. It was usually effective.

It is said that dog owners eventually come to resemble their pets. Certain is it that 'psychiatric counsellors' rapidly come to resemble their patients.

Perhaps the answer to the loon explosion is to give the counselling services a swift kick up the pants coupled with the advice, 'Get Lost!'.

THE MAN WHO KNEW TOO MUCH

POOR Rudolph Hess is dead and buried in a secret place after spending the greater part of his life in solitary confinement.

Perhaps, as it is alleged, he was mentally deranged - indeed it would have been a miracle if it had been otherwise after being so long denied human companionship a far worse punishment than is inflicted on even the most evil of mass murderers.

Certainly his lone flight to wartime Britain in an attempt to negotiate peace was a bizarre miscalculation, even if his aim of saving Germany from the suicidal folly of fighting a war on several fronts simultaneously was, for a German, a sound one.

But we were in no mood for peace, especially after the humiliating defeats we had suffered at German hands, and so Hess spent the war in solitary confinement.

After the war he was arraigned with the rest of the surviving top Nazis before the notorious Nuremberg Tribunals. I suppose one should not be too critical of the Nuremberg ethos - it is, after all, a commonplace of human history that a defeated enemy is murdered in cold blood. What made Nuremberg, in the real sense, obscene, was the attempt to clothe this ritual murder in spurious legality by the invention of new laws that ensured the conviction of the captives.

Yet Hess posed a problem to even this elastic law. Even Nuremberg could not convict a man for trying to make peace and the crime of thinking inconvenient thoughts did not exist until the invention of the Race Relations Act. Instead, he was convicted of "conspiring to wage aggressive war", or some similar high-sounding cant, and sent on his long and lonely journey to the grave.

But why was Hess held incommunicado for so long and as such vast expense? Was he the man who knew too much - about the nature of the Soviet-German pact, for instance, or the machinations of Western politicians? It is certainly a fact that when, some years ago, newspapers reported that a warm friendship and respect had developed between Hess and his British guards, those guards were immediately replaced. If he was mad, why?

Perhaps the saddest aspect of all is that Hess's epitaph should be the newspaper obituaries which were all, without exception, disparaging and dismissive.

The length and nature of his imprisonment, though well in tune with the naked brutality of communism and Judaism, was definitely unchristian.

So perhaps we should allow him a Christian epitaph, suitably modified to suit modern conditions:

"Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be strangled at Spandau!"

TARRING IN PROGRESS

IT IS reported that the French devil incarnate, M. Jean-Marie Le Pen, has been invited to address a fringe meeting at the forthcoming Conservative Party Conference.

Not only was this immediately denounced as "wholly undesirable" by the totally undesirable Roy Hattersley but it was criticised by "several Tory M.P's" who fear that M. Le Pen's views on coloured immigration might hinder the Tory Party's bid to make inroads on Labour's monopoly of the Black vote.

One such worthy, Mr Jerry Hayes, Tory M.P. for Harlow, is quoted as saying; "I believe that decent Conservatives do not want to be tarred with the same racist brush." I presume that when Mr Hayes says "racist" he means "racialist" and I wonder why a Tory M.P. should prefer the communist propaganda version of the word.

However, be that as it may; is Mr Hayes not aware that an expression such as "a touch of the tar brush" is racialist in the extreme? Is it a Freudian slip that betrays a man of nationalist steel beneath the Tory mush? Or is is just another case of a Tory trying to face both ways simultaneously; a practise that leads to a severe crick in the neck and dislocation of the brain - very prevalent in the Tory Party?

BLACKS TIGHTEN LINKS WITH IRA

by Steve Brady

BROADWATER Farm's Black rioters forged links with Ulster's IRA terrorists at secret Belfast talks in mid-August. Over a hundred Blacks, including hardened rioters from Brixton as well as North London, were brought to Ulster's terror capital jointly by the Provisional IRA, their mainland "Troops Out Movement" front, the paramilitary "Broadwater Farm Defence Committee" and Labour's underground "Black Sections", to "learn about the culture of resistance" from the Provoes. Labour councillors rubbed shoulders with IRA gunmen and bombers as Britain's enemies - militant Black, Republican and Labour Marxist - joined forces in their war against our country.

Labour "Black Section" spokesman Sanjay Vedi, a Labour Councillor in Hounslow, West London, and chairman of the Council "Equal Opportunities Committee", claimed the week-long meeting between hard-line Immigrants and the Provoes was meant to "work out ways of the two communities working closer together". Exactly how he as a Labour Councillor planned to "work closer" with murderers who shoot children in the back and set off bombs in crowded shops Vedi didn't explain. But he did admit the August meeting was the climax of earlier Black-Provo Belfast link-ups: "A group called the Black Delegation to the Irish Community has organised a number of weekend visits. Ours in going to be a bit more than that". In the light of these "visits" it is surely significant that at Broadwater Farm Police on the mainland were subjected for the first time to Black rioters using sophisticated tactics of sniper fire and petrol-bomb ambushes perfected by Republicans in Ulster's "Troubles".

This trip is only the latest evidence of increasingly disturbing links between the IRA, the Labour Party and Black militants on the mainland. Bernie Grant, now a Black Marxist Labour M.P., has long cultivated links with the Provoes, through their so-called "political wing" Sinn Fein. Sinn Fein is run by the IRA, and most of its officials, councillors, and M.P. Gerry Adams are convicted IRA terrorists. During his election campaign, Grant got a standing ovation from IRA supporters packed into Haringey's Chestnut Community Centre when he pledged to fight for the Provo aim of a "united Ireland" - the invasion of part of Britain by foreigners against the will of a million Britons - and to try and get convicted Provo killers freed from British jails.

As far back as St George's Day 1981, leading Black militant Darcus Howe, editor of Race Today, proclaimed to the cheers of Brixton Blacks rallied in support of convicted IRA killer Bobby Sands that "the overwhelming majority" on Blacks in Britain support the IRA. In return, the Provisional IRA have repeatedly declared their "solidarity" with "Britain's oppressed Blacks". And not just Britain's. In February 1976, IRA Belfast Commander Seamus Twomey met Rhodesian Black terrorist Robert Mugabe, now Marxist dictator of "Zimbabwe", in Andersonstown, West Belfast. At that meeting, the IRA agreed to train Black terrorists in Southern Africa to kill White men, women and children. No doubt they would be just as glad to train Black M.P's and Asian Labour Councillors.

Meanwhile the Police do nothing about growing links between hardline Blacks, the Labour Party, and IRA terrorists "so as not to damage race relations". White racialists around the world still think Irish Republicans are just Britain's enemies in an irrelevant "brothers' war", instead of the Blacks' allies in the world war against the White Man. And some Ulster Loyalists, though happily fewer and fewer, still think that opposition to Coloured Immigration has nothing to do with them. It's time to wake up, as the NF has, and get our act together. As our enemies, Blacks, Reds and Irish Republicans are getting theirs.

IRA SUPPORT

HARINGEY Labour controlled council is advocating the release of IRA murderers and bombers.

In the magazine IRISH VOICE, they carry Irish Freedom Movement adverts called for the freeing of 'Irish Prisoners of War'. The alleged 'prisoners of war' are in reality murderers and bombers who have butchered, mutilated and maimed soldiers, policemen and civilians in Ulster.

The advert from Haringey Council's 'IRISH VOICE'.

The Irish Freedom Movement marched through Sheffield in January carrying placards proclaiming 'For the IRA - Against the British Army'.

There can be no doubt where the loyalties of Labour Councils such as Haringey lie. They lie with terrorists and murderers.

ANGLO-IRISH SECURITY LEAKS

THE Anglo-Irish Agreement continues to be a total flop with absolutely none of the promised benefits even starting to be seen. The latest 'embarrasment' to the Government is the revelation that the Southern Irish Police, the Garda, is as leaky as a sieve when it comes to security matters.

On 13th August it was disclosed that the IRA had acquired a Garda document giving details of the holiday and consequent security arrangements of the British Ambassador to Dublin, Mr. Nicholas Fenn.

This was revealed on an Irish current affairs programme. Now if a television reporter has found evidence of one leak, the mind boggles at just how much information the IRA is getting from the Garda and from other Southern Irish institutions involved in the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

So far this rotten agreement is benefitting the IRA and resulting in more violence in Ulster. Margaret Thatcher still believes in her Poe-like infallibility and refuses to look at any of the vast amount of evidence which all points in one direction — the Agreement must be scrapped.

Money for Mayhem

A Junior Environment Minister, Marian Roe, has approved a grant of £24,533 to the Broadwater Farm Estate and pledged a further £1.25 million.

So the message from the Tories is clear. If you cause mayhem, riot and kill a policeman you will get additional Government help. If you behave yourselves and are reasonable you get no help at all.

This is proof of a weak frightened Government that has no principles at all.

Letters

Truly British

Dear Sir,

As a lifelong Rangers supporter and a current season ticket holder, perhaps I may be allowed to take issue with the comments made on the sports page (Issue No.11) of The FLAG.

Your correspondent states 'perhaps the most incredible case of a club buying a team has been Glasgow Rangers'. Really? Not Spurs? Liverpool? or Manchester Utd.? To name but three.

What Rangers have done is reverse the trend, which, for the past sixty years, has seen the cream of Scottish footballing talent head south to the lure of massive wage packets and other inducements with which no Scottish club could compete.

Rangers manager Graeme Souness has said that the present importation of top class players from south of the border is only a short term measure until the foundations are laid for a long term youth policy which will allow the best young talent not only to emerge but to play and stay in Scotland.

While it can only auger well for the English National Team to have Butcher, Woods and Co. playing in a highly competitive league, and in European competition, I don't think we are in any danger of witnessing anything like the ridiculous situation whereby Liverpool, an English club, (with a Scottish manager) can win the English FA Cup without a single Englishman (let alone a Scouser) in the side!

It should not be forgotten that the three Scottish clubs Celtic, Rangers and Aberdeen, who have won European trophies, have all done so with eleven Scots in their side, as had Dundee Utd last seasons beaten UEFA Cup finalists.

I will end by saying that Rangers have always been a truly British side. At the time of the Devolution vote in the 70's, the Rangers board took the unprecedented step of issuing a statement urging their supporters to vote No! I'm sure you will agree this action is hardly indicative of the narrow parochialism of which Scottish football clubs are often accused.

Yours faithfully,
Gus Macleod,
Govan,
Glasgow.

That Sort of Thing

Dear Sir,

A few weeks ago I raised the question via my local press as to why the St Albans District Council had demanded the removal of the Union Jack from the front of the new Texas Superstore.

I tried to rally support from the store itself but they were not interested so in a letter to a local newspaper I said that I suspected ulterior motives in so much as the council were perhaps worried that the sight of the Union jack flying proudly from its pole may cause passing viewers to explode into a frenzy of patriotism and run amok in the centre of St Albans singing 'Rule Britannia'.

My local councillor was more forthcoming. She justified the councils decision by saying "We have to be so careful, Union Flags, National Front, all that sort of thing .

What 'that sort of thing' was never became clear as when I asked her if she was conversant with NF policy and if perhaps she would like to spend some time discussing it, she suddenly remembered another appointment.

The official excuse from the council is that planning permission is required to fly the Union Jack. When the mood takes me I shall be applying for planning permission to wear my Union Jack lapel badge.

Dear Marge . . . . . .

Dear Sir,

I have seen copies of your newspaper The FLAG and write to complain about the Pakistanis who spoil our cricket by whistle-blowing, shouting etc.

Great Asset

Dear FLAG,

Having just returned from working three years in South Africa I was pleased to find that the National Front was still standing up for the British people and producing your very good newspaper.

I was especially interested to hear news of Caralyn Giles the Brighton National Front official.

I was at the Worthing College of Further Education in 1977 together with Caralyn when she made her NF views known to the local newspaper. She had to put up with a lot of unpleasantness with some of the students at the college being committed to the Socialist Workers and Labour parties.

Her stand won her a lot of friends amongst the silent majority of students at the college (of which I was one) and its rewarding to know that Caralyn is still flying the flag.

She's a great asset to the National Front.

TRUE FACE OF THE TORIES

Dear Sir,

In the absence of a Nationalist candidate in the General Election, no doubt some NF supporters ended up voting Conservative – on the grounds that when it comes to immigration policy, they are the lesser of the three evils. Well, anyone in the Vauxhall constituency of Lambeth who opted for this tactic, should read the letter from their Tory candidate, David Lidington, printed in the Sunday Telegraph on the 26th July.

The previous issue of the Sunday Telegraph had carried a piece by Sir Philip Goodhart, calling for government funded, voluntary repatriation to enable West Indians to return home to the Caribbean. In an amazing outburst, Lidington attacked this sensible proposal as "Obnoxious in principle, repatriation is also irrelevant to the difficult challenge of integrating the different ethnic minorities into British life".

I hope that at the next General Election, the voters of Vauxhall will have the chance to vote National Front.

Mike Stone
Torquay,
Devon.

SIR PHILIP GOODHART, MP, (July 19) is wrong. A policy of repatriation, even one intended as voluntary, would promote fear and hatred, not racial harmony.

Put his plan into effect, and every racist bigot in the land will use harassment and intimidation to swell the number of "volunteers." Socialist demagogues, too, will have relished Sir Philip's words, and will redouble their efforts to foster a ghetto mentality and distrust of public authority amongst our ethnic minorities.

Obnoxious in principle, repatriation is also irrelevant to the difficult challenge of integrating the different ethnic minorities into British life. Our nation now includes many thousands of second and third generation black Britons, who were born here and know no country but this.

DAVID LIDINGTON,
Conservative candidate,

MUSIC SCENE
with Bob Nash

AS FROM this issue The Flag's music section will carry an occasional interview with sympathetic bands. The first interview is with Croydon-based band, Sudden Impact.

▪ Croydon's Own: Sudden Impact

FLAG When and where were Sudden Impact formed?
Sudden Impact Sudden Impact were first formed in 1984 in Croydon. They were previously a punk band called Malicious Damage.

FLAG Who are the members of the band, where do they come from and how old are they?
Sudden Impact Paul Dunbar, the vocalist, is 21; Flubs, the bassist, is 19; Danny, the guitarist, is also 19; and Andy, the drummer, is 20. All the band come from Croydon except for Flubbs who lives in Mitcham.

FLAG Have Sudden Impact released any records as yet?
Sudden Impact No, unfortunately we have not.

FLAG Are there any plans for record releases in the near future?
Sudden Impact We have plans to bring out a single in the near future called White Slags which hopefully will be followed by an L.P.

FLAG What are the most popular songs which the band play live?
Sudden Impact Our most popular song used to be All For England but White Slags has since become even more popular.

Second place will probably be taken by our new song, When The Boat Comes In, which is not the same as the Skrewdriver song of the same title.

FLAG What sort of things do the band sing about?
Sudden Impact We mainly sing about race-mixing, Ulster and Nationalism.

FLAG Musically, which bands would you say have influenced Sudden Impact the most?

Sudden Impact Musically, we are influenced by Pink Floyd, Hawkwind and ZZ Top. Lyrically, by Skrewdriver.

FLAG What is the group's attitude to Rock Against Communism?
Sudden Impact Rock Against Communism is a great idea because it unites Whites, whatever youth cult they belong to, and it proves to the lefties that we can organise gigs as well as their Rock Against Racism rubbish.

FLAG What do the group think the future holds and what role do Sudden Impact hope to play it in?
Sudden Impact Unfortunately, we can't see what the future holds, but hopefully, by the time we have reached our best musically and lyrically, the White man will have woken from this multi-racial left wing circus caused by zionism and communism.

BUYING A STEREO THEN REMEMBER THIS

▪ Akai: Sponsoring senseless slaughter

THE National Front has regularly proclaimed its opposition to sports which cause cruelty to animals. One obvious such sport is bullfighting which, thank goodness, does not take place in this country.

However if you look closely at the photo above you can see another reason not to go to bullfights and not to buy a particular Japanese import. The electronics firm AKAI has been the first company to break into the sponsorship of bullfighting.

We suggest that everyone remembers this when they are thinking of buying a stereo system, radio, computer etc.

GREAT WHITE HOPE?

JOE Bugner waded into a bitter black-white race row in Sydney, Australia recently.

The 38 year-old former British Heavyweight champion, now based in Australia, said "The punters like nothing better than a heavyweight scrap between a white bloke and a black guy.

"Since Michael Spinks bombed out Gerry Cooney I'm the only top level white heavyweight left".

Bugner, not one to mince words, went on to say that he wanted to do well because he was White. He was also convinced that his title chances had been blocked because of the 'Black/White' situation.

Even though Bugner was attacked for making these outspoken comments, he was right to speak out if he feels that he has been the victim of so-called 'reverse discrimination' in favour of Blacks.

BULLDOG BREED

WHILE the whiners of the Rugby Football Unions of the Home Counties wring their hands about the problems of South Africa, the true feelings of most rugby players have ben shown by a small Sussex club.

Felbridge Juniors is a very small rugby club who have decided to thumb their noses at the bureaucratic officialdom of the rugby world who adhere religiously to the absurd Gleneagles Agreement whereby sportsmen are prevented from competing in South Africa.

Changing their name to Felbridge Bulldogs (the Race Relations boys won't like that) they have signed up a team of highly talented young players including some under-23 internationals who are close to full international honours.

On Friday 24th July they boarded their South African Airways flight to Johannesburg. Mr Stork, the tour manager said:

"I will not allow the tour to be used in any way. I will make it my business that the boys discover South Africa in reality, not the country depicted in the press. I'm not going to take them into the townships, just as nobody bringing a tour here would go into Brixton to show the British system".

Ho, Ho, Ho, that's going to set the cat amongst the pigeons. Britain might well be faced with a boycott by Black African countries, Viv Richards might go home, Frank Bruno might refuse to appear on British television, Ian Botham might smoke something in protest!

Come on the BULLDOGS!!!

IS BRITISH FOOTBALL GOING BROKE?

A recent survey of English football clubs has exposed the appalling fact that 80 out of the 92 Football League clubs are insolvent.

This is now causing many financial advisers to put forward the idea of ground sharing in the same way as Charlton and Crystal Palace. This desperate and totally unsatisfactory solution is simply a way of trying to keep football going as a business while ignoring the wishes of the fans to keep football going as a sport.

For many years now owners of football clubs have been taking their profits out of the game while few have put much back in. Some football grounds are a disgrace, having hardly changed since before the second world war.

The profits from football clubs have disappeared into the wallets of the owners, the fans have been left out to get a drenching on the terraces. The only solution is for football clubs to be owned by the fans and the local communities rather than greedy property developers who simply have their eyes on the development value of the land the club occupies — until this happens the wishes of the fans will continue to be ignored.

LEEDS DO IT AGAIN!

LEEDS NF continued their unbeaten run in the National Front Football League by beating West Midlands NF eight-five on Sunday, September 9th.

The game was hard fought throughout and refereed ably by Brian Husband of Newcastle NF.

The Leeds team, full of confidence after two previous victories in London put them top of the League, laid siege to the West Midlands goal in the early stages. Indeed, after only ten minutes the home side had stormed into a commanding four goal lead.

But West Midlands NF fought back courageously and at half-time there was only one goal in it with Leeds leading five-four.

The second half was as tight as the first and only a few basic defensive errors by the Midlanders prevented the final result being much closer.

The two outstanding players were Keith Brandon for Leeds, whose defensive skills gave the Yorkshire team the edge, and Will Ayto for the West Midlands who never stopped running and battling.

John Hill, West Midlands Regional Organiser for the NF, told The Flag: "Leeds did very well and deserved to win but the lads from the West Midlands think it will be a different story when we play the return match."

In the meantime, with three wins in three matches, Leeds look red-hot favourites to become the first ever NF Soccer Champions.
